A SPECIAL TRIBUTE

MR. M. H. MacMILLAN

THE YEARBOOK THIS YEAR IS DEDICATED TO MR. M. H. MacMILLAN

Mr. MacMillan, who began teaching 35 years ago, is retiring in June after 11 years as Principal of Courtland Senior Public School. He was not a stranger to the school when he arrived as Principal because he had attended Courtland as a student himself from kindergarten through to grade eight.

Mr. MacMillan went into teaching because he loves children. This is evidenced by all his actions at Courtland. Whether a reprimand for some misdemeanor or a word of praise, all decisions are based upon what is in the best interests of the child.

Mr. MacMillan's knowledge, wisdom, humanity and sense of humour are famous throughout the school, and indeed, throughout the County. He may be observed on any given day sharing a smile with a pupil, an idea with a colleague, or a joke with his staff. How many administrators end a discussion in their office by offering all and sundry a jellybean from a dispenser on their desk?

Courtland is one of the finest schools in an excellent system. Visit the school on any working day. Notice the bustle of activity, the intentness of the teachers, the variety of material taught, but note above all the atmosphere. It is relaxed, friendly and purposeful. This is an enriched setting created over the years by Mr. MacMillan.

Thank you Mr. MacMillan. You will be missed.

Stranded

In the burning, hot, desert sun
I wait for what may become of me.
Sand and hills and cactus plants,
Keep me company.
I must keep my weary eyes awake,
In hope for someone to come.

Whitening the ground
It falls softly like powder
Waking no one up at night.

Lightening lights the darkened sky
The thunder booms next
Huddling under your covers
Waiting there until it's gone.

The owl perched upon his branch,
With night vision so superb.
It looks around and spots its prey,
And gets ready to glide.
It flies so quick, so soft,
The only sound is the mouse's
Last squeak.

Soaring and gliding
Above it spreads its wide wings
Over head it cries
Dipping into the water
It flies off towards the sun set

The Students Revenge

We have had tests for a week or more,
And now all our hands and fingers
are sore.
They have drained all information from our brains.
If they don't stop, we will go insane.

We should test them until they go wild,
So we can just sit back and watch
and smile.
We can watch them do tests all day.
As the information in their brains fades away.

Then comes the horror of marking the tests,
Which keep coming from the north, south, east and west.
Maybe writing tests is not so bad.
But they still make us very mad.

Kids

Why was she so unreasonable?
I didn't let her for her own good.
She ran upstairs.
Tears streaming down her face.
Then I heard her door slam shut.
Now she'll probably run away again.
I know she'll come back though.
She's run away before.
Kids!

The Bluejays' Revenge

It was the top of the first with Trammel at bat;
Steib let the ball go and he gave it a whack.
It flew up and up like a bullet from a gun,
While the players watched the ball clear the fence for a run.

In the bottom of the third with nobody out;
Bell was on base and Fernandez struck out.
Lee did the same Iorg got a hit.
To tie the game up they were counting on Whitt.

As Whitt walked up to the plate, bat in hand,
He dug his cleats into the rough, brown sand.
When the ball was released he swung all about;
And what do you know, Ernie Whitt had struck out.

It was not the bottom of the ninth, with Bell up to bat,
The pitcher walked him and on first he sat.
Fernandez was up and at the ball he swung,
And there it was, the winning home run.

Our Thoughts

Why was "she" so unreasonable?
We tried to recall what she had said.
She was right; we do overprotect her,
But we just want her safe and happy.
She was also right,
That we don't explain why we say "no".
Maybe it's time we did.
Maybe then she'll understand,
That saying "no" wasn't to punish her.
We headed towards her room.
Maybe now we'll understand,
Each other better.

In and Out?

In and out, in and out,
Which way will it be next?

My little puppy cannot decide.
Hot outside,
Cool inside,
He decides to sleep halfway.

Your can hear it running blindly

Krysta's Revenge

As Krysta stood up to bat,
On the bench her team sat.
As she hit the bat to her feet,
The players hearts skipped a beat.

Krysta looked at the pitcher with confidence,
And pointed her bat to the leftfield fence,
Her knees and elbows were bent,
Then that sphere by the pitcher was sent.

She gave that ball such a blow,
It sailed into the bleachers tenth row.
The pitcher turned in disgust,
And kicked up a big cloud of dust.

As Krysta rounded the bases,
She looked at all the cheering faces.
At last she had hit a homerun,
She had shown them who was number one.

The Siamese Cat

There once lived a Siamese cat,
As cunning as can be,
With gleaming malicious eyes,
Who spat anger venomously.

He went straddling up a tree,
With perfect flexibility,
Now you know that a Siamese cat,
Is agile as it ought to be.

The Relaxing Walk

I was very upset and "uptight". The perfect solution, I thought, was a quiet, relaxing walk around the neighbourhood. Grabbing my red, spring jacket, I stepped out into the cool, refreshing air of the fall day and knew my idea was right. I would soon feel perfectly relaxed. My anger was fading already. I opened our front gate and stepped onto the sidewalk. Leaves blew around me as I strode briskly and happily down the street.

As I neared the corner, my mood suddenly changed. A growling, fierce German Shepherd blocked my way. His lips were pulled away from his teeth in a snarl, revealing sharp, strong fangs and his eyes watched my every move. Startled, I foolishly turned and sprinted, imagining the dog getting closer and closer. I ran three blocks before I chanced looking over my shoulder. Still running at a very fast pace, I turned my head. No dog was behind me. I had been running frantically for three endless blocks and the dog had not moved from his original position.

Wondering why people didn't keep their fierce dogs on leashes, I walked on. I passed a house from which heavy metal music was blaring. The owners of this house obviously thought that they were responsible for entertaining everyone on the street.

My head began to pound and my feet were beginning to feel quite strange. They were becoming extremely heavy and it was difficult to pick each one up and put it down. Confused, I looked down. I was standing in moist cement. Parts of the sidewalk had been repaved and were not yet dry. My shoes were covered in wet cement. A stick lay on the street and I sat on the curb prying off the cement.

A sudden screech made me jump in shock. Greasy-haired, teenaged boys were driving a black sports car, paying no attention to the speed limit. They suddenly veered the speeding car towards me. Shrieking, I jumped to my feet and ran....straight into a tree. I could hear the carful of boys laughing.

Enough was enough! Infuriated, I stomped home, promising myself never to go on a peaceful, relaxing walk again.

FIRE GUTS COURTLAND CLASSROOM

At about 7:20 AM on Wednesday, January 29, 1986, Mr. R. MacTavish and Miss C. Murray discovered that fire had broken out in Room 6. Mr. MacTavish immediately alerted those in the school by pulling the Fire Alarm while Miss Murray telephoned the Kitchener Fire Department. Quick response by units from Headquarters and Station #3 on Ottawa St. brought the fire under control but not before tens of thousands of dollars of fire, smoke, and water damage occurred. Officials of the Waterloo County Board of Education launched an immediate clean-up effort, bringing in janitorial assistance from neighbouring schools. Courtland was closed for only one day, although many changes had to be made to accommodate those students displaced by smoke and fire damage. At time of writing the cause of the blaze is listed as 'suspicious' and is still under investigation. Meantime Room 6 has been restored and most routines are back to normal.
