Principal's Message

R. E. GAGE

Sitting down to write some comments for the yearbook is a challenge . . . yet a joy! I will not try to highlight the many activities that occur at Courtland in the span of a school year. That is the purpose of the remainder of this yearbook. Permit me, therefore, a few reflections instead.

Demands upon students, parents and teachers change constantly. In a time of extremely rapid technological advances, we are constantly surrounded by advertising that promotes the idea that we deserve all forms of material goods. At the same time, we often feel the effects of "information overload" and many other daily stresses in our lives.

To be more than mere survivors, we must be able to adapt to changes. Indeed, it is helpful if we seek out change and assist it. In this way, we grow!

As has often been said before, life itself is not a goal. It's a journey. You get there step by step by step. Are we sometimes in too much of a hurry? This can be a very tough question for most of us.

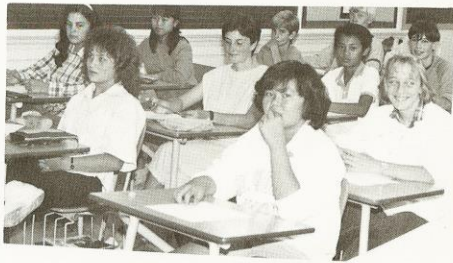

What do we need to continue to learn and grow, to be happy with our endeavours, no matter what our age? And . . . how do we get what we need? Consider this -

- . If you need encouragement, give encouragement to others.
- . If you need understanding, give understanding to others.
- . If you need love, give love to others.

At Courtland, we hope that we have given a lot to our students to assist their growth and development. In turn, we trust that our students will continue to help each other, and to be a positive influence with anyone they meet along the "roads of life".

Kitchener, Ontario
N2G 2T9

Dear Students of Courtland Avenue Senior Public School:

We very much appreciated your canned food donation and $25.00 cheque from the proceeds of your Valentine's Dance.

It is very encouraging to hear of youth involvement in the needs of the community. You are all to be congratulated!
The food items will be very helpful in packing hampers for needy individuals.

Thank you again for supporting the programs of the House of Friendship.

Sincerely,

Gone

Eating berries, gathering nuts, living their lives pleasantly.
Enclosed in the peace and tranquility of it all.
The perfect equilibrium - magnificently simple.

Then, in marches the enemy - armies of men.
Brainwashed by greed to destroy,
and that is what we did.

Homeless now are the squirrels,
their dwellings sold
To the lumber mills.
Lifeless are the fish,
Their home drained
for a new condominium.

Money comes rolling in,
but was it worth it?
The wildlife there is gone,
with it, the beauty.

Maggie Bowman
Form 83

Changing

Why was "he" so unreasonable?
He never understands.
I ran out the back door,
My face filled with anger.
We tried to talk,
But fought instead.
I always did things his way.
I just couldn't stand it anymore.
Running away was my answer.
I knew I was doing the wrong thing.
But I didn't care.
After a day I thought it over.
I would go back.
We talked calmly this time.
Understanding led to change.

I cannot write a poem,
Even though in the mist of the meadow
There are daises,
white as freshly-fallen snow
and buttercups like gold.

I cannot write a poem,
Even though in Autumn
Leaves lie thick upon the ground
And I hear
the crisp and crashing sound of them, as infants play.

I cannot write a poem,
Even though words are whirling
in my head,
like a tornado
Never coming to rest
upon my paper.

I cannot write a poem,
But once the words
have settled down,
upon my paper
The wicked tornado returns...
And carries them away.

Understanding

Why was she so unreasonable?
I only want the best for her.
Those parties go much too late.
She's too young for parties like that.
Why doesn't she have any nice friends?
My mother would have never allowed such a thing
Then again.
I never agreed with my mother.

I cannot write a poem

and the owl sings
his haunting song.
The bats fly by,
little shadows dancing
through the trees,
dancing so quickly
I cannot catch them,
to put them on my paper.
I cannot write a poem.

Into a breathtaking swan.

Spring is back again,
It's finally that time of year,
Flowers are blooming,
Love is polluting the air,
Spring is a time for new life.

In the old oak tree
The buds are starting to bloom
Then comes the axeman
Chopping down the old oak tree
Using it for his wood stove

I'm Sorry

Sarah didn't know which feeling was worse, the excruciating pain in her chest or the thought of her mother being dead.

She couldn't believe that just a few minutes ago she had been on her way to the hairdresser to get her light brown hair permed. She had dressed up in a new outfit, a gorgeous red skirt topped with a cute teddy bear t-shirt. She may have even laughed at the way she looked all ragged, torn and dusty, but with the huge pillar across her chest even the slightest movement caused pain.

Sarah may not have been physically strong, yet she possessed a great amount of inner strength and was able to calm herself almost as soon as the building had collapsed. The task was not very easy as she heard voices screaming everywhere around her.

Sarah just wished that she had pushed her mother far enough so she wouldn't get hurt, because her mother was a very delicate and fragile woman.

Sarah felt really bad because just before the building had toppled she and her mother had been arguing. It had been a really stupid argument, Sarah thought, it wasn't even something important. They had been arguing about whether blue or green looked better on her younger sister Diane.

Sarah hoped she could have the chance to apologize for their ridiculous argument and all the other stupid things she'd done. Why, oh why had she made her parents come today. Her hair could have waited, but no, she had been too selfish.

Sarah wished she could undo all the bad things she'd done and say, "I'm sorry."

All of a sudden the pain grew lighter in her chest and Sarah could breathe normally again. Strong hands lifted her up and onto a stretcher. Her parents were right there beside her. Before the blackness engulfed her, Sarah whispered, "I'm sorry," and closed her eyes for the very last time.

The Leopard

With evil eyes it watches
Closely, every move
Planning its attack carefully,
Swift its feet must prove.
It crouches in the grass,
Silent, low and still
Waiting for its prey,
Waiting for the kill
The unsuspecting buffalo
Is grazing very near
The Leopard leaps high in the air,
The buffalo flees in fear.

Images of a Tornado

A tornado is a giant straw, slurping everything in sight.

It started out as a spinning top,
twirling and whirling vigourously,
beneath the hands of the clouds.

The wind of death churned the playground into a battlefield.

A giant vacuum out of control,
with no bag to contain its debris.

Dead and bare they are
They all look so pitiful

The Racer

At the break of dawn, on a dusty country road, an excited young man on his bike emerged from the dense fog.

His short brown hair was held snugly to his head by a scarlet racing cap while his blue t-shirt flapped in the breeze. Streamlined navy racing shorts stuck to his muscular legs as his green shoes pumped furiously at the squeaking pedals. Clapsed in his sweaty palm was a half-filled drinking bottle. As the finish line came into view he took a deep breath and pedaled with all his might. His exhausted body seemed to be intent only on winning this grueling race.

This was a determined young bike racer who was about to triumphantly cross the finish line and win the Tour de France race.

Reading

Reading is like a captured humming bird,
Set free.
Broadening your imaginative horizons.
Each book you read, increases your knowledge.
A book will free you,
Taking you into all dimensions.
Killer, unicorn, detective, scientist or alien,
These are but a few of books' treasures.
To me books are like drugs,
I'm addicted to the printed word.
Books are like good friends,
Always there when in need.
If life is getting you down,
Make your own world,
With a book.

Lightning
Flash; onto the night.
Slicing the cold midnight air.
Plumeting to earth.
Carving clouds to fold fingers.
Light engaging in combat.

Fighting furiously, sweating steadily, badly bruised beaten.....

The fish go swimming
In their crystal blue fish pool
I like to watch them
Swimming sinuously about
Through their fragile green playhouse.

Nature's Fury

The village below the mountain
Bustles with activity
But it doesn't know the tragedy
That is about to happen.
Suddenly, the top blows
And lava pours out
Like water
Down upon the innocent town below.
People, inflicted with panic, scurry
As they try to get out of the way
Of Mother Nature's Fury.
But they are too slow.
People are frozen solid
In their last moves.
The statues are all that's left
Of that quiet little town.
It is over.
All is quiet,
And a bird chirps.
